Base ball: At Washington, Hartford vs. Washington 5; at Chicago, Chicago 16, St. Louis Red Stockings 2.

A number of bank cashiers met in New York yesterday and perfected arrangements for a banking convention at Saratoga.

The heavy rain of eight hours yesterday has completely quenched the flames in the lumber regions of Pennsylvania and in all parts of the country.

The friends of the late Gen. John C. Breckinridge, in New Orleans, met at the St. Charles Hotel last night, and adopted resolutions eulogizing the life and character of the deceased statesman.

Justice Bradley, of the United States Court, and District Judge Erskine have refused to enjoin the sale of the Mason & Brunswick road, or to appoint a receiver, as petitioned for by John P. Branch, of Virginia.

The recent sale of the water works in Memphis has been set aside by the consent of counsel, owing to the large crop of injunctions growing out of the same. The trustees will hold possession of the works and sell again on 60 days' notice.

A London Daily News special from Vienna says that a person has been arrested in that city, who was the bearer of an anonymous letter containing an offer to assassinate Bismarck for a million florins. The writer of the letter has not been discovered.

The Hon. George Vail, of Morristown, N. J., died Sunday evening, aged 72. He was twice in Congress and afterward Consul at Glasgow under President Buchanan. He was concerned with his father, his brother, Alfred, and Prof. Morse in perfecting the telegraph.

Lutz, Bowman & Co.'s collieries at Manoning City, Pennsylvania, resumed Monday at a twenty per cent reduction of the basis of 1874, for one month, after which permanent arrangements will probably be made. An early resumption in the entire anthracite region is expected.

American Horse, with his five followers, returned to the Tremont House yesterday. The President has arranged a meeting with the Sioux to-day at the White House, at which he proposes, it is said, to make a proposition to them in relation to the business for which they are here.

The following revenue gaugers were dismissed yesterday: George J. Jennings and Charles H. Davis first Ohio district, and H. C. McMullen, first Illinois district. Wm. M. Meredith has been appointed storekeeper for the first Missouri district, and Linden A. Smith gauger for the same district.

A post mortem examination of the horses that have died by the diseases prevailing in St. Louis, made by a number of prominent physicians and veterinary surgeons, shows conclusively that the disease is cerebro-spinal meningitis. The malady is not spreading much, and yields quite readily to treatment.

Recent estimates of the defalcation of Abraham Jackson, the missing lawyer of Boston, swells the amount to over $700,000. It is stated that Jackson is in Vermont, but it is more generally believed that he has carefully provided against arrest, and is on his way to Europe. No steps have been taken yet to secure him.

Gen. R. F. Patterson, collector of the internal revenue for the Memphis district, yesterday seized and libelled sixty-one barrels of whisky in the house of H. H. Mette & Sons, of that city, purchased by them of Beausberg, of St. Louis. Mette & Sons are believed to be innocent holders, having purchased it in good faith.

The stockholders of the United Railroad Companies of New Jersey, yesterday elected the following directors for the ensuing year: John J. Astor, Wm. G. Cook, A. L. Dennis, Benjamin Fish, Hamilton Fish, Cambridge Livingston, Nehemiah Perry, Isaac W. Scudder, George C. Stevens, Robert A. Stockton, Asbel Welsh and Samuel Welsh.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the breadstuffs market, says that the drought has been felt in France and a poor yield is probable. This coupled with the appearance of grasshoppers in the United States will probably make low rates of short duration, notwithstanding the continental markets are down from sixpence to a shilling.

President Jewett, of the Erie railway, in an interview with a reporter, stated that the Pennsylvania Coal Companies, have refused to enter into any negotiations for the purchase of the Erie coal lands, and in view of this state of affairs he has called a special meeting of the directors for to-day, to take appropriate action under the circumstances.

The New York Board of Trade has adopted resolutions denouncing the prevalence of smuggling has been due to the demoralized customs service and the extortionate and exorbitant tariffs: that probably the most effective mode of suppressing smuggling is to establish a revenue tariff, and reform the civil service and that this board protests against the degrading immorality of the wholesale trade in smuggled goods by merchants of the city.

Thomas W. Piper, the alleged murderer of Mabel Young, was arraigned at Boston yesterday. A person who passed the Warren

A statement of the condition of the road asserted that $3,500,000 have been sunk in building and equipping it, and the earnings are not sufficient to meet the necessary expenses. A committee was appointed to visit the railroad and ascertain its true condition, its original cost, its present liabilities, and what amount will be necessary to be expended to place the road in working order, and what will then be its value per mile.

The Presbyterian General assembly at Cleveland yesterday refused to reconsider its acceptance of the report of the committee in reference to the church South. A resolution was adopted recommending prayers against the grasshopper plague. The report of the standing committee of home missions was submitted. What was Councilman Madden's question of privilege?
The German advertising costs about three times as much as English.

The abolition of the German printing will save the tax-payers several thousand dollars a year.
The Holy Father evidently thinks he has done a big thing for America by giving it a Cardinal.
The belief is strengthening in New York that the Erie road will soon pass into the hands of a receiver.
THERE is no need to have city advertising done in German at all. But if it is done, it should not cost more than English.
THE Cincinnati Gazette, in a quarter of a column of pretty vigorous writing against Gen. Sherman, for his Memoirs of the War, charges him with "wild untruthfulness," in three big sentences—which is rubbing it in, as it were.
COUNCILMAN Madden, Chairman of the Finance Committee, tried to introduce a question of privilege on Monday night, but was prevented from doing so. The matter was evidently important, and an eager public would be glad to know what it was.
To-day is Derby day in England, when every man in the United Kingdom who possibly can, goes to that famous race course. As usual, Parliament adjourns over on account of it. There is no day in the year so important in the eyes of the average Englishman. Our regard for the Fourth of July is not a circumstance in comparison.
EVARTS is expected to begin his speech to-day in the Beecher trial. He is expected to do the eulogistic part, Judge Porter having done the denunciatory. A juror took sick yesterday and an adjournment had to be had, which may continue. If all goes well, however, we are pretty certain to be done with it by the middle of June, perhaps sooner.
The office of Committee Clerk was established by the Republicans and was a piece of political extravagance and favoritism. But the Democrats have no intention of abolishing it. They keep up partisan rule in every way and place possible. What odds does it make? Workers and friends are provided for and the people pay for it. If we ever get a business government there will be no committee clerks doing work which other officials are paid to do. This particular one is another Republican curse coming home to roost, like the German printing seal.
The Pennsylvania Republican Convention meets to-day and there is considerable interest felt as to what action shall be taken in reference to the third term question. One set, headed by old Simon Cameron, is determined that no utterance shall be made, while an opposing faction is equally determined that the seal of condemnation shall be put upon the project in a respectful yet firm and unequivocal manner. Both sides are working vigorously to accomplish the result desired, and as it seems a case in which compromise is inadmissible, a hot fight may be looked for to the bitter end.
A QUIET observance of Decoration Day here would be a good thing, and it seems a shame to let the day go by without some kind of notice. It is unnecessary to indulge in great public display. The marchings and salutes and orations can all be dispensed with, but it would be well for the people to go in families and companies, bearing their offerings, and through this slight effort testifying their memory and appreciation of the services wrought by that vast army of noble men, a small portion of which lies in that beautiful part of Crown Hill, peacefully awaiting the resurrection day. Their memories should be cherished, and the custom of strewing their resting places with flowers once a year should be perpetuated.

MONTGOMERY BLAIR's letter on General Sherman is quite savage. The General is a cold blooded, selfish man beyond doubt, and great praise of his compeers was not to have been expected. But that not a single one of them should find favor in his eyes and be regarded as entitled to some credit, is surprising. In his book he praises but one man of prominence, and that is Abraham Lincoln. He has aroused a storm of criticism which will have the effect of weakening his hold upon the people, and which may reduce the estimate of his military capacity and services. Some of his acts will not bear criticism any more than those of some of the other Generals, whom he attacks with such freedom. If Gen. Sherman foresaw the buzz his memoirs would awaken it is not strange that he was anxious to get away from Washington, and if his object was to make things lively for the boys he has succeeded very effectively.

The object of advertising is to make known your business or your wants. The best advertising is that which reaches the most people likely to buy of you or to satisfy your wants. The best medium is that which reaches the largest number of these people. If your business is confined almost entirely to the city, it is not wise to advertise only in a medium which is seen by few people in the city. To derive the greatest benefit you want to use a medium that is read by the people in the city. Advertising is a most excellent thing for business men, but thousands of dollars are thrown away every year in this city alone, in patronage given to mediums which do not extensively reach the class from whom the benefit must come to the advertiser. After deciding to advertise at all, it is the main thing to advertise well, and many men never do that. They throw away their money on papers of small circulation, directories, railway guides, and other trumpery issues, when half the money invested in a well established, influential newspaper of large and widely extended circulation, like The Evening News, would accomplish fifty times as much.
SECRETARY ROBESON is clearing out the Navy if he is not building it up, and the process is developing the manner in which things have been done. He is getting rid of the old and unfinished vessels at prices which must please purchasers. The Antietam, an unfinished vessel on stocks at Philadelphia, was sold the other day for $5,500. The Government has expended hundreds of thousands on her. The copper on her alone is estimated at over $50,000. Not long since a steam frigate, the California, was sold at San Francisco for $23,650, after she had cost the Government a million and a half, three times as much as a private builder could have secured her for. This vessel was utterly unseaworthy and probably the Government got all she was worth. The San Francisco Chronicle, in noting the sale, gives this account of the class she belonged to:
The family of which she was a member consisted of eight sisters, all of which have been of little account. The Java, New York, Pennsylvania and Antietam are all on the stocks since 1864, and the Illinois disappeared very mysteriously in 1873. The Guerriere on her first trip to the Mediterranean unfortunately ran aground on the Italian coast, was taken off, and the whole repaired at a cost of $100,000 and returned to New York, where she was sold in December 1872 for $54,000. Her original cost was $1,154,325 10, and her age seven years. The Delaware, after a trip to the East Indies, has returned to New York unit for any future service. Thus it will be seen that of the whole family only three have for a space of three years done any sea service, although $10,000,000 have been expended on these ships. The aggregate tonnage of these eight vessels was 19,920 tons, and intended to carry 126 guns.

A Period of "Shrinkage."
[New York Times.]
We are passing through a period of "shrinkage," of contraction, which is the inevitable sequel of the expansion witnessed during the war, and which is probably still destined to cause much individual loss and suffering. In the course of such a process, the weak are doomed to go under, the number of failures is, and probably will be, surprisingly large, and it becomes the duty of the creditor class not to make it larger than is absolutely unavoidable. The summer may be expected to help us, but we may readily look forward with hope and confidence to the fall. It is highly creditable to our business people that, upon the whole, great strength, patience, and forbearance have been exhibited in all directions. The condition of affairs which we have witnessed during the last eighteen months have been predicted ever since 1864, and political economists proved that whenever it occurred half the country would be totally ruined. In reality, we have suffered very much less than the most sanguine of us could have anticipated. The progress toward a healthy state of business is not rapid but it is sound, and when it is completed we may safely look forward to a long and uninterrupted period of prosperity. It is the imperative duty of both the great parties of the day to combine in bringing about this result, and to be careful that the national commerce shall not be unnecessarily injured in their struggles. The interests involved in that direction are too vast to be sacrificed to personal ambition or to political intrigues.
An Egg-regious Fraud
In Paris they make two eggs out of one by cutting the shell with a glazier's diamond and then slicing the egg quickly with an oil knife. The two halves are deftly dropped into boiling butter on the plate, which "fixes" them, making them look like two, and for which the customer—who has not seen the performance—pays without suspicion. Who couldn't pay the Germans their indemnity and get back to specie payments in three years with such gains?
Too Finicky Entirely.

"The pleasing juice of corn" sounds better than the abrupt word whisky.

The Fading Flower.
FROM THE JAPANESE.
I wandered where the sweetest of Summer made complete, and all the woods were blushing with the fiery glow of flowers.
When softest winds were blowing, and songful streams were flowing.
And sped, alas! too swiftly, the honey laden hours.
I found amid the splendor of a little bud so tender, I trembled with a thrill of joy I ne'er had known before.
Like one in a sad story who turns a page of gloom, Or shipwrecked sailor nearing a smooth, palm-planted shore.
With pride beyond all telling I bore it to my dwelling.
I placed it where it shone like a star in night's engulfing gloom:
And there through years of gladness, or weariness and sadness,
It filled with heaven's own lustre the lonely little room.
Now, though its leaves grow crisper, and cruel voices whisper,
The flower hath lost its beauty and growth dim and old.
To me it beams as brightly as when first it quivered lightly.
In morning's dewy freshness, when the distant hills were gold.

The Carte de Visite.
Her little card lies there:
The lines both dark and fair
By sunlight gleam and shadow
The look that wrought the carte
Lies in my inmost heart.
Is it not there?
Her beauty's far renown
Made the great sun look down
From heaven above her,
And when he saw her best,
He gave this, a request,
To all who love her.
He stampt with amorous light
The lines of black and white,
In rounded cluster;
But could not paint the fair,
Silk-softness of her hair,
Her eyes' deep luster.
His strength was all too weak
To tint her changeful cheek,
Soft as the peaches;
Or give her lips' repose
The loveliness which grows
With gentle speeches.
No, it is poor at best;
But let it lie at rest.
The book shall win it.
And be the page as white
As is the soul to which
While she lies in it.

The enterprising lady who invented the Bloomer costume is Mrs. D. C. Bloomer, of Council Bluffs, Iowa. Finally he said to him: "Childs, I have thought for a long time that America ought to have a poet-laureate, and if you'll get the Philadelphia Union League to sign your papers, I'll give you the place."—[Courier-Journal.]

THE HOPPER GRASS.
He Cometh, from Whence and How—
A Rock Mountain Pastoral Epic.
[From the Denver News.]
The grasshopper;
He cometh;
He cometh numerously;
He bringeth his family;
Also his relatives,
And his friends.
Likewise his mother-in-law;
And her friends;
As well as all that hate her,
And they are legions.
And no green thing remaineth where the hopper hath been.
His pathway is the abomination of desolation.
The ranchman mourneth for his green fields that were, but are not;
Mayhap he sweareth;
Possibly he saith audibly, and crieth aloud—dam.
What careth the hopper-grass?
It troubleth him not.
Ask the prophets of Kansas;
And the wisemen of Nebraska;
And they will answer likewise:
But the relief committee agent lifteth up his voice and calleth the hopper Blessed.
He cometh in the latter summer days;
As the winds come when forests are rendered;
As the waves come when navies are stranded;
Like unto a Democratic victory.
He alighteth on the potato vine;
And on the fragrant tomato tree;
And the succulent roasting ear, whilst it is yet in the milk and toothsome;
And upon all other fry is of the field that cometh late into market;
And they all disappear, and are seen after that evil day no more forever.
And the lady grasshopper maketh straightway her nest "down in the cornfield."
And in the wheat stubble;
And upon the hillside;
And all over the sandy plain;
And everywhere else under the sun;
And she filleth the nest with eggs;
And then she continueth to make nests and fill them likewise with eggs every day, until the winter days come and the ground freezeeth hard, when no grasshopper can make nests.
And the eggs; are they not ranch eggs? With double yolks?
And warranted to hatch?
Yea, verily, and the warranty is good.
And the lady grasshopper's mate, what of him?
Verily I say unto you, he sitteth upon the sweet potato vine, and singeth all the glad some summer day;
He climbeth up the corn stalk and loppeth off its verdant branches;
He taketh no heed for the morrow;
Nor of the groans and curses of the irate ranchman;
And in the hottest autumn days he leadeth the fisherman beside the babbling waters;
And up the steep mountain side;
And over the prickly pears;
And through soap weeds;
And among the thorny bushes;
And when at last the fisherman falls upon his knees and puts his hand upon Mr. Hopper, where is he?
Alas, he is not there;
But he soareth aloft;
And cracketh his heels together;
And laugheth out of his left optic at the fisherman, who is seated on the hillside, Digging cactus thorns from his hands and knees.
And framing cuss words.

Settling Down to Business.
[The Nation.]
In all probability the world has already passed through the heyday of legislation; the era of brilliant schemes of reform, of gigantic extensions of the suffrage, and of parliamentary oratory, is gone; and the legislatures of the future will be humdrum bodies, whose greatest need will be a close attention to business, and whose greatest danger will be the possession of prerogatives handed down from a time when there were real parliaments.

The Contagion of Fright.
A curious instance of the contagiousness of fear was shown on a large scale in Strauss's corset factory at New Haven, Tuesday. A number of the girls employed began talking about the frequency of sudden deaths, and became quite sober in their conversation, when one of them, more lively than the rest, to change the subject, placed a small land turtle, which she had found somewhere, upon the bench of her neighbor, who, seeing it, was so startled that she fainted away. This circumstance, coupled with their former conversation, had such an effect upon the girls that, one after another, they fell into a deathlike stupor, until seven of them were stretched upon the floor. One of the men, too, though evidently struggling against the contagion, also succumbed, and the foreman, becoming alarmed, sent all hands from the room and shut down work for the day.
Senator Jones Comes Home Shorn.
[Washington Dispatch.]
Senator Johnson, of Nevada, to whom Grant wrote his wonderful financial essay, has been into Wall street, and come back a sadder and wiser man. He had himself made a director in the Panama railroad company, and undertook to bull the stock from 35 or thereabouts, and succeeded in running it up to about 175. Jones was at once made $300,000 ahead. All went well. Jay Gould let him have the stock, and just as he was ready to buy, and when the Senator had completely loaded up with the stuff, the wicked Gould took his scalp as neatly as Red Cloud himself could have done. The Senator is out some $700,000, and is now said not to be so very anxious to keep a house in Washington City.
The Duration of Life.
[Deutsche Versicherungs Zeitung.]
In ancient Rome, during the period between the years 200 and 300 A. D., the average duration of life among the upper classes was thirty years. In the present century, among the same classes of people, it amounts to fifty years. In the sixteenth century the mean duration of life in Geneva was 21.21 years; between 1814 and 1833 it was 46 68 years; and at the present time as many people live to see seventy years of age as 300 years ago lived to the age of 43.

A Bishop in Name.
[Chicago Times.]
The new bishops of the Reformed Episcopal church make up in size of their dioceses what they lack in the number of their subjects. The Right Reverend Dr. Cridge, Bishop of British North America, doubtless has the largest territory and the smallest church membership of all the bishops on the face of the globe.

The committee of arrangements for the State Temperance Convention report that many more places are needed to accommodate the delegates on that occasion, than have yet been heard from, and earnestly request any person who will entertain guests at that time to communicate the same to Miss Hoyt at once.

The Tennesseans.

As was anticipated, the Tennesseans were greeted by another immense audience on their second appearance at the Academy last evening, and succeeded well in entertaining their hearers with slave cabin songs and ballads of more intellectual cast. The singers individually displayed considerable musical talent, which was brought out prominently in several solos and quartets and indicated unquestionably that their voices were capable of cultivation to a high degree. The selections mostly comprised religious melodies, the words of which were laughable and were screwed into every conceivable shape to make the rhyme complete. A few comical songs were sung with good effect and were well received by the audience, which was very much in the mood for appreciation of the entire performance. The troupe has been prevailed on to appear at the Academy next Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Violent Death.

During the sudden storm last evening several employes at the Eden lumber yard, on Massachusetts avenue, near St. Clair street, sought shelter in the dry kiln, but seeing the wooden chimney tottering from the force of the wind, started to run to a secure place. W. D. McLeland, one of the employes, was caught by the falling wreck and crushed under the debris, his head being jammed to a shapeless mass. Death was instant. His remains were removed to his father's residence, 356 Winston street, and buried to-day. The deceased was 19 years of age and but lately removed from Madison to this city.

The Atlantic Garden.

The proprietor of the Atlantic Garden, if recollection of Criminal Court doings be not at fault, was fined for maintaining a nuisance and the nuisance was ordered abated. Why has not that order been enforced? Taking last Sunday for instance, the gatherings about that garden are as disorderly as ever, and its every day operation, if rumor can be believed, is a reflection upon the efficiency of the police. What is the matter with the Chief, and is it possible that he has lost what little "sand" he once possessed?

An Ignorant Agriculturalist.

A traveling pineapple peddler yesterday sold two specimens of his fruit to a lady on Ellsworth street, near New York and believing his story that the pineapples were of home cultivation, she immediately planted them in her front door yard, and is now patiently awaiting coming of the fruit. It will take but a few days to convince her that pineapple is not indigenous to this soil, and it is safe to affirm, when such discovery is made, that that peddler will not dare re-visit Ellsworth street.

The Days of Steam Probably Numbered.

Mr. Cowles, one of the editors of the Cleveland Leader, has written a letter to his paper describing a trial which he witnessed in Philadelphia of experiments with a new motive power, discovered by John W. Keely, being a vapor hitherto unknown to chemists, generated from water and air without heat, at a desirable pressure, and used the same as steam in driving a piston. The experiments were tried in the presence of several gentlemen besides himself, including Wm. H. Rathford, Chief Engineer, United States Navy; B. Howard Rand, M. D., Professor of Chemistry in Jefferson Medical College; J. Snowden Bell, a mechanical engineer of high reputation in Philadelphia, and other expert and competent engineers and mechanics.

Mr. Cowles says:

For years Mr. Keely has been endeavoring to discover, in the works of nature, a hidden power or motor, which could be utilized for the benefit of mankind, and has succeeded. The result of his discovery so great, so marvelous and stupendous that the practical mind will accept my statement with a feeling of incredulity. But I have seen his engine in operation, propelled by a gas of unknown vapor of immense pressure, which is created from a small quantity of water with a certain admixture of air, and which is produced purely by mechanical means, without the aid of galvanism or electricity, without heat, and without cost, aside from wear of machinery and cost of an engineer. So what I have seen with my own eyes I must believe.

All the description Mr. Cowles is at liberty to give to the apparatus producing this vapor is to say that it is called a "Generator" or "Multiplier," that it is about three feet high, two feet long, and thirteen inches deep, made of brass and wrought iron in a heavy and strong manner, the whole of which consists of a series of iron chambers, cylindrical in form, connected by pipes furnished with various cocks and valves. This multiplier was suspended from the ceiling by a chain three feet above the floor, showing it to be entirely disconnected with anything else, except the pipe connecting it with the "receiver." The vapor generated is conveyed to the receiver, and from the receiver is conveyed by engine pipes to the engine. The receiver is made out of wrought iron, two inches thick, capacity about twenty gallons, and shaped like a soda fountain. The peculiarity of this receiver is, it is made of wrought iron, without a rivet, and entirely welded. The engine is the ordinary engine such as is used for steam.

The peculiarity of this vapor is, that it can only be used to the best advantage at a pressure of 20,000 to 30,000 pounds to the square inch. How he produces the vapor from his "multiplier," or, rather, "generator," is only known to himself and two other gentlemen, of whom is Charles E. Collier, Esq., a well-known patent lawyer of Philadelphia. The secret will not be divulged till the claims of the inventor, or, rather, the discovery, are fully protected by patents in this country and in Europe. The multiplier will work automatically, and keep the receiver supplied while the engine is running. For the reason of the engine, it is intended to multiply the number of receivers according to the size of the engine.

Those who witnessed the operation of generating the power agreed that the inventor, in an inappreciable period of time after the water had been put in the generator, did generate a vapor having an expansive force of 2,000 pounds to the square inch; that no heat was employed, no electricity or galvanic action, nor was heat, electricity, or galvanic action discernible as resultant of the action; that the water, after being used, gave the senses no sign of the use of chemicals, and the vapor was free from smell or taste. The company who are now interested with Mr. Keely propose to have an engine on exhibition next fall, and they propose to drive a portion of the power in the halls of the centennial exhibition with a Keely engine next year.

BRETT HART'S IMPROVED ESOP.

For Intelligent Modern Children.

I. THE FOX AND THE GRAPES.

A thirsty fox one day, in passing through a vineyard, noticed that the grapes were hanging from such a height as to be out of his reach.

"Ah," said the fox, with a supercilious smile, "I've heard of this before. In the twelfth century an ordinary fox of average culture would have wasted his strength and energy in the vain attempt to reach yonder vine. Thanks to my knowledge of vine culture, however, I at once observe that the great height and extent of the vine, the drain upon the sap through the increased number of tendrils and leaves must, of necessity, impoverish the grape, and render it unworthy the consideration of an intelligent animal. Not any for me, thank you." With these words he coughed slightly and withdrew.

Moral—This fable teaches us that an intelligent discretion and some botanical knowledge are of the greatest importance in grape culture.

II. THE FOX AND THE STORK.

A fox one day invited a stork to dinner, but provided for the entertainment only the first course—soup. This being in a shallow dish of course the fox lapped up readily, but the stork, by means of his long bill, was unable to get a mouthful.

"You do not seem fond of soup," said the fox, concealing a smile in his napkin. "Now, it is one of my greatest weaknesses."

"You certainly seem to project yourself outside of a large quantity," said the stork, rising with some dignity, and examining his watch with great emphasis. "Oh, I have an appointment at 8 o'clock which I had forgotten. I must ask to be excused. Au revoir. By the way dine with me to-morrow."

The fox assented, arrived at the appointed time, but found, as he fully expected, nothing on the table but a single long-necked bottle, which he opened, and which the stork was completely extracting by the aid of his long bill.

"Why, you do not seem to eat anything," said the stork, with great naivete, when he had finished the bottle.

"No," said the fox, significantly, "I am waiting for the second course."

"What is that?" asked the stork blandly. "Stork stuffed with olives," shrieked the fox, in a very pronounced manner, and immediately dispatched him.

Moral—True hospitality obliges the host to sacrifice himself for his guests.

III—THE WOLF AND THE LAMB.

A wolf, one day drinking from a running stream, observed a lamb also drinking from the same stream, at some distance from him.

"I have yet to learn," said the wolf, addressing the lamb with dignified severity, "what right you have to muddy the stream from which I am drinking."

"Your premises are incorrect," replied the lamb, with bland politeness, "for if you will take the trouble to examine the current critically, you will observe that it flows from you to me, and that any disturbance of sediment here would be so far as you are concerned, entirely local."

"Possibly you are right," returned the wolf, "but if I am not mistaken you are the person who two years ago, used some inducement against me at the primaries."

"Impossible," replied the lamb; "two years ago I was not born."

"Ah, well," added the wolf, composedly, "I am wrong again. But it must convince every intelligent person who has listened to this conversation that I am altogether insane, and consequently not responsible for my actions."

With this remark he at once dispatched the lamb and was triumphantly acquitted.

Moral—This fable teaches us how erroneous may be the popular impression in regard to the distribution of alluvium and the formation of river deltas.

Learned Something.

[Detroit Free Press.]

A slim old chap and a fat woman, husband and wife, from the East, were riding to a hotel from the depot yesterday, when the man caught sight of the sun and yelled out: "Wall, darn me ef that ain't curus!"

"What?" she asked.

"Why, the sun's right here on my left hand in the morning! When we're home it's right over the horse-barn! Wall, wall—one's got to travel afore he knows anything!"

It would be interesting to know what official it is that gives notice to inmates of sporting houses of the mediated raid upon their places by the police authorities as was done yesterday in the case of an East Washington street resort.

Short Horn Breeders in Convention. At the afternoon session of the Short Horn breeders yesterday it was announced that a set of English and American herd books had been procured, by order of the Legislature, and were deposited in the State Library, and a resolution was offered that the books be transferred to the library of the Agricultural Rooms, by which arrangement they will be more convenient for reference.

A general discussion was had on the subject of the increase of interest in the improvement of cattle in several counties of the State, from most of which encouraging reports were given.

The proper age at which to fatten and sell cattle was talked of at length, the opinion prevailing that beef for such purposes should be at least two years old.

Mr. Lowder read a paper on the value of short horn bulls, which by a common course of reasoning he figured out one such animal would net his owner $3,750, if properly used, during a period of three years.

TO-DAY'S SESSION.

The convention resumed its sitting this morning, at which a number of additional delegates put in their appearance, and took an active part in the proceedings.

Mr. S. F. Lockridge read an extensive paper on "Indiana as a grazing State," in which he maintained that our soils were rich and varied and possessed many of the necessary requisites which go to make a good grass producing country. In concluding he said: "Our geographical position, our material resources and our very respectable climate warrant us in the belief that we are destined for a place in the first rank of stock-raising and grass-producing States. As we grow older we shall grow better and richer in this respect. What we most need is the application of science to the labors of the agriculturist, the grazer, and the breeder. The countries of Europe know this better than we, and the eastern part of our country better than the western. Science is often considered as fit only for the inside of college walls, but the man of the future must reject it from his economy, does so at the peril of his pocket and his social position.

The agriculturist who cannot analyze the soils of his own fields, which annually pour into his granaries their bountiful harvests, can in the future certainly add but little to the advancement of his country and his profession."

The features of this essay was then made the subject for discussion, and the opinion of the Convention seemed to be in accord with the points advanced in the paper.

Dr. Stevenson was requested to give an account of a recent trip through the South and remarks he was surprised to see the good grass which that country produced, and which offered a most excellent food for cattle. Said the farming of the South was cotton, and you can't persuade the farmers there to raise anything else. The West must furnish them with bacon, corn, flour, and, in fact, the supplies which the South must have, he believed the South would be a good stock raising country, the climate and everything being favorable to such.

Mr. Thrasher read the following paper on "What Constitutes a Model Short Horn Cow." Head short, broad between the eyes, eyes full and prominent, yet mild, small muzzle, with orange nose, black nose not allowed, mottled nose objectionable, slim neck, neat in throat latch, with no surplus skin underneath the neck, brisket prominent and full, with straight bottom line, flank well let down, horns waxy in color, standing level, with the back, or slightly drooped is better, straight and level on the back, wide level hips and low, ribbed out well behind the shoulder, with full crops, tail small, hide yellow or orange color, soft and elastic to the touch, with good, thick coat of hair, with fur next the skin, as a good handler always has, fine in bone, legs straight, hind legs. She may be white or red, or a mixture of the two.

The points advanced in the paper called out considerable discussion the remainder of the morning session.

The Convention adjourns sine die this evening.

No. 8 Reel House.

After storming over 21 years of fire service the No. 8 reel house, on New Jersey street, was abandoned to-day for the new quarters further east on Washington street. This house was built on leased land from Mr. Seibert, in 1854, for the use of the "Wooden Shoes," or hand-engine company, and upon organization of the paid fire department, was the quarters of the hook and ladder, No. 1. The structure is a rickety concern, which has outlasted its usefulness, and is not worth the squabble which the city and Mr. Seibert are now having over it. Monday night Andy Wallace was appointed by the Council as an appraiser of its value, but this forenoon Mr. Seibert declined to appoint one to act with him, and consequently Mr. Wallace went ahead on his own. Mr. Seibert claims over $400 rent, or at the rate of $85 per month, for the time since the lease expired, which was 14 months ago, and he also holds that the improvements are his because the city has overrun the limit at which such appraisement should be made.

The Usual Robbery.

Friday last G. W. Caslin, of Urbana, Ohio, while waiting for a train at the Union Depot, was enticed to that commonest kind of a common dead-fall on South Illinois street, and robbed in the usual manner of $50. Caslin went to Winchester, and returning this morning, was persuaded by the proceedings against James Hamilton, chief swindler of this swindling concern, the promptness with which the City Marshal served that warrant was commendable, and when brought before the Mayor, Hamilton waived preliminary examination, and was committed to the city jail, to await the proceedings of the prosecuting witness, but if the felony is not compounded there is hope that the future will see this commonest kind of a common dead-fall obliterated.

Saved from Drowning.

Yesterday at Broad Cut, Hubert Praeger, one of the family now playing at the Metropolitan, saved a colored boy from death by drowning. The boy had sunk the third time before his attention was called thereto, but Praeger boldly plunged to his rescue, withstanding some on the bank yelled, "Come back; it's only a nigger." The lad's name was ascertained to be Henry White, and it is proper in this connection to mention that Mr. P. is an expert swimmer, and to-day carries the gold medal as champion of the New York swimming association, which was presented him in September last. His boldness and humanity in this case deserves the utmost credit.

Court Matters.

Court proceedings were exceedingly slim to-day. In the Criminal Court John Williams was on trial for stealing a carpet, and in the other courts nothing of importance was done. Before the Mayor, Thornton Archer, Thomas Manning, Ed. Cavanagh, John Condon and John Tracy were drunk; Ben Johnson profaned; William Davis was indecent; and David Stewart assaulted John Shaler. Caleb Lons, charged with stealing from David Marley, was acquitted. M. A. McDonald, arrested by Officer Daubenspeck for fanning driving on the Nicholson, had his trial continued.

The popular nine per cent. loan being made by E. B. Martindale for George P. Biebel & Co., of Hartford, may now be had in sums of $5,000 up to $50,000. The loan may be repaid in ten years, or may be paid in $1,000 installments at any time. The security required is unencumbered city property worth double the amount of loan in any of the leading cities of the State. The interest is payable during the life of the loan. Persons desiring to build may obtain one-half the value of property including improvements. No life insurance required, and no red tape.

GENTLEMEN—We have now had the Type-Writer about a month, and are entirely satisfied with it. There can be no doubt in regard to its usefulness. LYMAN'S HISTORICAL CHART, designed to be to History what a map is to Geography. It presents strikingly to the eye contemporaneous events and characters and thus fastens them upon the memory in their proper relation to each other. Every one, whether engaged in the pursuit of history, will do well to have this Chart before him. Sabbath School Teachers will be greatly aided by its use.

Prof. W. A. BELL, in the Indiana School Journal, closes a descriptive notice of the Chart by saying: "It certainly is a great aid, getting a comprehensive view of history, and is almost indispensable in the study of comparative history. To this recommendation we add the following testimonials, just now kindly furnished:

From Rev. J. L. Withrow, D. D., pastor Second Presbyterian Church: "Lyman's Historical Chart is a more complete aid to the study of history than has come into my hand. Helps, which are elsewhere scattered, are less grouped."

From Rev. J. P. Kunkler, pastor First Presbyterian Church: "I know of no work so highly and generally recommended by scholars as this Chart, that gives a bird's eye view of the world's history."

From Prof. GEORGE P. BRUNN, Superintendent Public Schools: "We are using Lyman's Historical Chart in our High School, and consider it to be a great aid in fixing in the mind the events of history, as well as an excellent book of reference."

From Rev. J. L. La May, D. D., pastor Roberts Park M. E. Church: "Having examined this Chart, I heartily concur in the above recommendations."
